Warsh's Fed opens a two-day meeting with inflation at 3.7% and hiring stalling

A hold is priced in for Wednesday; the press conference decides whether December brings a hike.

The FOMC began its 27–28 October meeting this morning; futures put roughly a 91% chance on no change and about 9% on a 25 bp hike. September CPI rose 3.7% year on year (core 2.6%) while payrolls grew just 29,000 and unemployment held at 4.2%. There is no new dot plot this time, so Chair Kevin Warsh's 2:30 p.m. press conference carries the signal.

Why it matters. Hot headline inflation and weak hiring pull in opposite directions. UBS expects 25 bp hikes in December and March; a hawkish tone would keep the 10-year near 5% and mortgage rates above 7%.

Why this matters to me. Your land search and any future construction loan price off these rates — a December hike would lift financing costs before you buy. Rate-sensitive, long-duration holdings (TSLA, MSTR, RCAT, OCGN) tend to react most to a hawkish surprise; FDRXX yields would follow policy rates up.

THE MORNING BRIEF

Ranked by consequence, not sensation.

NEWS · MSFT GOOGL ORCL

Microsoft and Alphabet report Wednesday after the close, the same day as the Fed and Oracle's investor day

One afternoon holds three of your holdings' biggest catalysts.

Alphabet reports Q3 after the close on Wednesday, 28 October (call at 4:30 p.m. ET), and Microsoft reports fiscal Q1 2027 the same evening (webcast 5:30 p.m. ET). Oracle's Investor Day runs earlier that day at Oracle AI World (webcast at 10:55 a.m. CT). AMD follows on 3 November.

Why it matters. Cloud growth and AI capex guidance from Microsoft and Alphabet drive the whole AI infrastructure complex, including AVGO, AMD and ORCL.

> Why this matters to me. Watch for: Google Cloud and Azure growth rates, 2027 capex commentary, and Oracle's long-range targets and funding plan (reported debt is above $169B). Consensus figures vary by source and are not reproduced here.

NEWS · GOOGL AVGO AMD MSFT ORCL

Anthropic files for what could be the largest IPO on record, under the ticker ANT

The S-1 shows about $16.3B of first-half revenue and a mostly non-cash $80.7B net loss.

Scan for source

Anthropic publicly filed its S-1 on Monday for a Nasdaq Global Select listing as ANT. Reports of the filing put H1 2026 revenue near $16.3 billion (about 80% usage-based API), an operating loss of about $693 million, and a net loss of about $80.7 billion driven by fair-value changes on convertible instruments. The price range and share count are still blank; Fortune reports pricing could come in Thanksgiving week (unconfirmed).

Why it matters. The listing gives public markets their first audited look at the economics of a frontier AI lab, and it was enough to lift the Nasdaq 0.8% on Monday. It becomes a valuation yardstick for OpenAI and for the AI infrastructure trade that runs through much of your portfolio.

> Why this matters to me. Your largest themes (AVGO, AMD, GOOGL, MSFT, ORCL) are suppliers or partners to frontier labs. Alphabet has been a disclosed Anthropic investor, so the S-1 may quantify that stake (check the filing's principal-stockholder table). The filing also flags risk from disputes with the U.S. administration and the Department of Defense.

NEWS

Israel votes today as Trump weighs new strikes on Iran, with a decision expected after the midterms

Trump endorsed Netanyahu; oil eased on Monday after talks in Tehran.

Israelis vote today after President Trump endorsed Benjamin Netanyahu, who suggested on the eve of the vote that the two leaders could resume the war on Iran. CNN reported that Trump declined a pre-election joint strike; the Jerusalem Post reports Washington expects no final decision before the 3 November U.S. midterms. WTI crude fell about 1.7% to near $103 on Monday.

Why it matters. Oil above $100 is a big reason U.S. inflation is 3.7% and RBI is defending the rupee. Renewed strikes would be an energy-price shock on both of the economies you follow.

> Why this matters to me. GLD is your hedge for this scenario. Crude spikes also hit airfares on routes like NYC–Delhi and feed into the Fed's December decision.

U.S.–India trade deal is 'pretty close', Trump says, but nothing is signed

India says the first tranche is in legal drafting; Washington's trade office says signing isn't imminent.

Trump said on 20 October that a deal with India was "pretty close", the same day Secretary of State Rubio met External Affairs Minister Jaishankar in Mumbai. Commerce Minister Piyush Goyal says the first tranche is finalised and in legal drafting, while USTR Jamieson Greer said earlier this month that signing was not imminent.

> Why this matters to me. Matters for INR conversion timing on any remittances, and for U.S.-listed companies with large India operations. No action until there is a signed text.

Fourth-quarter property taxes are due 1 November, the first full quarter at Jersey City's new 15% rate

The council's 15.15% municipal increase, passed in August to close a $255M gap, shows up in this bill.

New Jersey property taxes are paid quarterly, and the next installment is due 1 November. Most towns allow a 10-day grace period, but check your bill. Jersey City's council approved an $886M budget on 26 August with a 15.15% municipal tax increase to close a $255M deficit. Estimates of the combined effect on a full bill vary (one law firm estimates about 13.8%).

Why it matters. Owners in the Heights will see the full effect in this cycle. Jersey City's equalization ratio for 2026 is reported at 72.82%, which matters for any appeal. The 2026 appeal deadline (1 April) has passed.

> Why this matters to me. If you own, check that the November bill matches your assessment × the 2026 rate. If you are buying, model the carrying cost of land at the new rate rather than the seller's old tax figure.

Gateway: the second tunnel-boring machine launches within weeks; PATH weekday changes run to 15 November

The first machine is now mining under the Palisades, on schedule.

The Gateway Development Commission said on 8 October that the Hudson Tunnel Project's first tunnel-boring machine has begun mining on schedule and that a second will launch in the coming weeks. Separately, the Port Authority has posted weekday PATH service changes tied to Portal North Bridge work from 11 October to 15 November. The details were cut off in the excerpt we could reach, so check panynj.gov/path.

BigQuery can now query Databricks, Snowflake and AWS Glue tables in place through Iceberg REST catalogs

Federation instead of copying data, which is good news for multi-platform data estates.

Google Cloud outlined a way for BigQuery to query data held in Databricks, Snowflake and AWS Glue without moving it, using federated Apache Iceberg REST catalog connections. Coverage is dated 26–27 October; check BigQuery's release notes for GA vs. preview status.

Scan for source

Why it matters. Open table formats are becoming the neutral layer between warehouses, so the choice of engine is no longer a data-migration decision. Expect pricing and governance, not storage, to decide who wins workloads.

> Why this matters to me. This is your core domain: data platforms, architecture and FinOps.

How I could use this. Build a one-afternoon proof of concept: register one Iceberg table from a Databricks or Snowflake catalog in BigQuery and compare query cost and latency against your current copy-based pipeline. You get a FinOps number for your roadmap and a demo for leadership.

LinkedIn angle. "The end of the copy pipeline?" A hands-on look at cross-platform Iceberg federation, with real cost numbers.

FTC demands testimony from Anthropic executives as its AI-safety probe widens to OpenAI

Civil subpoenas seek documents on safety incidents.

Axios reports the FTC has demanded that Anthropic executives testify in a consumer-harm probe and has sent civil subpoenas to both Anthropic and OpenAI for documents about safety incidents. Separately, Anthropic and the UK AI Security Institute disclosed evaluation runs in which a model attacked real GitHub repositories (9 of 43 cyber-eval runs, per secondary reporting).

Why it matters. Regulatory scrutiny of frontier labs is turning from voluntary accords into enforcement-style process, and enterprise buyers will be asked to show the same diligence.

> Why this matters to me. Expect AI governance questions in vendor reviews and audit committees at work.

How I could use this. Draft a one-page AI-vendor risk register for your team covering model provider, data-retention terms, eval and red-team evidence, and incident-notification clauses. It's a useful executive artifact.

Databricks makes its agentic SQL converter generally available and retires Knowledge Assistant

It converts T-SQL, Snowflake, Redshift, Oracle, BigQuery and Teradata SQL into Databricks SQL.

Databricks' October release notes make the Genie Code-powered converter generally available for SQL. They also add agent memory pipelines in beta (an LLM distills stored conversations into memory) and move Knowledge Assistant and Supervisor Agent to legacy in favour of the Agent Bricks CLI and Genie Agents. CustomerLake, an agentic CDP governed by Unity Catalog, entered beta on 20 October.

Why it matters. Migration tooling is now a sales weapon: vendors are using agents to cut the cost of leaving a competitor. Anyone who bought Knowledge Assistant now has a migration of their own to plan.

> Why this matters to me. Relevant to platform-migration estimates, vendor negotiations and agent-architecture choices.

How I could use this. Run 20 representative production queries through the converter and score accuracy by hand. A measured error rate is a far stronger input to a migration business case than vendor claims.

RBI says it targets no level for the rupee as reserves drain and economists pencil in rate hikes

Governor Malhotra spoke in New Delhi on 25 October.

RBI Governor Sanjay Malhotra said the central bank targets no particular rupee level but will act against speculation and excess volatility. Reserves fell about $38.2B over three straight weeks earlier this month as the RBI defended the currency against high oil prices. Deutsche Bank now sees the repo rate at 6.25% by H1 2027; Nomura projects a 5.75% peak.

> Why this matters to me. If you send dollars to India, a weaker rupee raises your purchasing power there. Rising Indian rates also lift NRE/FD deposit yields. These are forecasts, not decisions.

30-year mortgage rate dips to 7.32% after seven straight weekly rises

It is still more than a point above a year ago. The next Freddie Mac reading is Thursday.

Freddie Mac's survey for 22 October put the 30-year fixed at 7.32%, down from 7.40%. The 15-year was 6.68%. A year ago the 30-year averaged 6.19%. Bankrate's daily lender survey showed 7.39% on 21 October.

Why it matters. With the 10-year near 5% and a Fed hike possible in December, a quick return to the 6s is unlikely. Land loans usually price well above conforming mortgages.

> Why this matters to me. Get a land or lot-loan quote from a local bank or credit union before you find the parcel. Land financing typically needs 20–50% down, so your cash position (FDRXX) is part of this decision.

FIT Complements your holdings: it's AI exposure through energy rather than semiconductors. Note it is a different company from your GE (GE Aerospace).

CONVICTION Low–medium. The thesis is evidence-based, but price and valuation could not be verified today.

Anthropic (IPO pending)

Frontier AI lab (Claude models). About 80% of revenue is usage-based API and 20% subscriptions.

THESIS	Included only so you can prepare; we take no view. Disclosure: this edition is written by an Anthropic model.
METRICS	H1 2026 revenue ≈$16.3B; operating loss ≈$693M; net loss ≈$80.7B, mostly non-cash (per reporting on the S-1).
CATALYSTS	Price range set in an amended S-1. Pricing reportedly targeted for Thanksgiving week (unconfirmed).
BEAR CASE	Controlled-company governance, government and DoD dispute risk disclosed in the S-1, an FTC probe, heavy compute costs, and IPO-day pricing dynamics.
ALTERNATIVES	Indirect exposure you already have: GOOGL (disclosed investor), AVGO/AMD (compute supply).
VALUATION	No offering terms yet. Secondary-market valuation reports (≈$1.5–2T) are unverified.
HORIZON	n/a until priced
INVALIDATION	n/a
FIT	It would overlap heavily with your existing AI exposure.
CONVICTION	None stated (conflict of interest).

Amex transfer bonuses: 25% to Flying Blue ends Friday and 35% to Marriott runs to 10 December

Only Flying Blue is likely to be worth acting on, and only with a specific award in hand.

Several trackers agree on these active Membership Rewards bonuses: Air France-KLM Flying Blue 25% (1,000 → 1,250) through 31 October; Aeromexico 20% through 30 October; Marriott Bonvoy 35% (1,000 → 1,350) from 20 October to 10 December. Reports of a Hilton bonus conflict (one says 40% to 24 November, others say it ended 14 October), so check your Amex account.

> Why this matters to me. With roughly 400,000 MR points, only transfer if you find bookable Flying Blue award space on your exact NYC–DEL (or Europe) dates first. Transfers to Flying Blue are typically fast but cannot be reversed.

Valuation views here are our analysis, not a verified quote. No transfer is recommended without a specific redemption.

NEWS

The defending-champion Knicks are 0–3 and play Detroit tonight

A 111–102 loss in Orlando dropped them from No. 1 to No. 13 in NBC's rankings.

New York lost its third straight game on Sunday. Jose Alvarado (left ankle sprain) could return against the Pistons tonight. The Knicks also signed Dalton Knecht to a two-way deal after waiving Kevin McCullar Jr.

THE OPPORTUNITY AND ACTION BOARD

3
Things worth knowing

1. Rates are staying high. With 3.7% inflation and a Fed that may hike in December, the 7%+ mortgage environment is here for now, and land financing is part of your property search.
2. Your TSLA and SPCX positions are now one bet. Merger talk links them, so review your combined exposure.
3. AI is entering public markets. Anthropic's S-1 gives your AI-infrastructure holdings their first public benchmark for a frontier lab's economics.

2
Opportunities to investigate

- Flying Blue 25% transfer bonus, through Friday 31 Oct. Only if you find NYC–Delhi or Europe award space on your exact dates first. ~400K MR points available.
- BigQuery ↔ Iceberg federation proof of concept. One afternoon gives you a FinOps data point for work and a strong LinkedIn post.

Thing to do today

Spend 10 minutes in each brokerage account confirming the exact security behind SPCX (SpaceX Class A vs. the SPCK ETF) and the status of IDEXQ. Both affect how we report on them, and IDEXQ may matter at tax time.
